THREE COMELY ACTRESSES.

MISS WALLIS, MISS ELLIOT, AND MISS BUSHY ENCOURAGED. They Are Rather Clever in Three Current

hey Are Randoncy to Fairness in Two Plays A Tendency to Fairness in Two War Dramas Certain Aspersions Cast Upon the Hypnotism of Prof. Ferris. There is an example of the adequate doing of there is "The Squire of Dames" which is rather interesting. The smallest rôle in the play, except those of the two servants, is one of the best acted, because nothing is left out that could make it effective. The part of Elste is intenificant and unnecessary, and it affords to Gladys Wailis no opportunity to exhibit any extraordinary quality, but the personation conits completeness of detail. The child Elere is in love in a vein of particularly idiotic schoolgirl mmance, with Lord Eustaes Chetland, or, as the erent shows, with Lord Eustace's beard. Her oments of pronounced admiration in the first set amuse the audience; Miss Wallis's imitation ormild buriesque of childishness entertains peo-ple. When she suddenly moves her stool to get between his lordship and Zoe Nuguetson, who is at the plane, everybody laughs; when Elete is sent to bed and attempts to bid Chetland good-night and bursts into a ludiorous crying fit many persons applaud. The excellence of the perform-ance, however, is not in these manœuvres, but in the fact that the actress keeps herself continuously and uninterruptedly in character. Her face has the right expression and her gestures and gait the right action, even when she svirtually doing nothing. In the last act the is virtually doing nothing. In the last act the correctness and restraint of Miss Wallis's acting in a rôle which is essentially a burlesque is even more noticeable, and brings this slight sketch into harmony with the comedy tone of the play. In addition to Maud Adams, the comedians with when Charles Frohman has surrounded John Drew display a skill in keeping in the right key, as it were, which imparts to this pleasant comedy a thoroughly human interest, which gradually increases to the very end of the action.

The public is too apt to regard a beautiful ess merely as a stage exhibit, and occasion ally a manager aids in this injustice to a talted and hard-working woman by utilizing her comeliness in advertising the cast of a produc-This is legitimate, perhaps, as feminine leveliness is attractive in a play, and is particularly fitting when it helps the scheme of the dramatist in drawing a fascinating and engaging character; but emphasizing the persons charm of an actress often delays public recognition of her more lasting and sterling qualitie as an artist. Besides Maxine Elliot who has safely passed the mere beauty stage of her carer, and whose good acting in "A House of Cards" has established her professional worth, there is Amy Busby, the Priscilla Bellamy in "Madame." She has done clever work before, but has been best known for a sort of beauty which is in strong contrast to Miss Elliott's rich coloring. In "Madame." instead of an ingénue, or a suffering heroine, she appears as a sort of juvenile society adventures. Priscilla Bellamy is the daughter of an honorable family, and has an enviable social position; but her father is very poor, and she, apparently, falls in love with a rich man, who is just back from Australia. By the aid of Madame and of Priscilla's father, he speedily recovers his proper position in society, and bereer, and whose good acting in "A House or apparently, falls in love with a rich man, who is just back from Australia. By the aid of Madame and of Pricella's father, he speedily recovers his proper position in society, and becomes utterly and hopelessly enamored of the beautiful Pricella. At the very beginning of the play, with only the faintest assistance on the part of the dramatist, the audience feels that this sweet and seemingly innocent girl is quite heartless and rathershrewd in her views of life. This impression is conveyed by Miss Busby's acting. She moves and speaks like an ordinary society girl of the American rather than the English type, a trifle blase, cool, unemotional, and mistress of herself; yet, without oversteppins the line of maidenly demeanor, she makes one suspect and dislike her. For a very pretty andcharming girl to achieve this without any flagrant or even well-pronounced manifestation of a debased nature is a delicate piece of art, of which Miss Busby would scarcely have been thought capable. The revelation of possibilities, not of facts, which comes in the second act is partly a surprise and partly an explanation, so daintilly has the actress auggested the dividing line between her outward seeming and her actual character. In the last act, carefully following the course indicated by the dramatist, she betrays the falsehood of her life in her eyes and manner without resort to melodramatic or tragic expedients, and while maintaining always the outward calm and the air of innocence which almost deceive Madame all over again and really puzzle the audience. As a foll to Rose Coghlan's expert maintenance of the element of suspense in his play, Amy Busby is an important factor.

The modern development of the war drama

The modern development of the war drame presents a peculiar theatrical phase of the same spirit of fairness as seems to be leading, in the political world, to a general resort to arbitration. Sutton Vane's "Humanity," a melo-drama which has just returned to the New York stage at the Academy of Music, deals with the South Africa war of a decade or more ago: but, although written for the English stage, and depicting British heroism and British victory, it ents also the sterling manly qualities of the Boers. The sympathy of the audience is enlisted on the side of the English hero and heroine, but enmity is not encouraged toward true to neither side. Villainy in the abstract or rather in the concrete form of a single man, and not villainy as stamping one party in the combat at arms, is the thing against which the hostility of the audience is excited. This is true also of "The Last Stroke" at the Star Theatre, where the crime of a nation is presented only so far as is necessary to the story, and the active and immediate condemnation of the audience is directed toward one man, who is a spy and a contemptible person. The gentlemanty instincts and the better qualities of the Spaniards are permitted to be known, however lively a sympathy with the Cubans is called forth. In the dramas dealing with our own civil war this treatment of a great conflict is even more clear, and it is the selfish rogue, who could never be a hero in any cause, that is held up to the scorn and execration of the audience. It is the old, old story of the villain of the play centring in himself all that is sinful and abominable, whatever may be the follies and mistakes of the other dramatic persons. This is a commendable feature of all warlike and political plays. Those that neglect it invite fallure. or rather in the concrete form of a single While the courts are dailying with the topic of hypnotism as an excuse for irresponsibility, the wonders of the science are displayed several times a day by Prof. Ferris at Huber's Museum in Fourteenth street. The Professor is a tall, severe-looking young man with deep set eyes. and an unblemished frock coat. In modestly explaining his powers he indulges in sweeping. long-armed gestures that are awe inspiring while his fingers move continually as if he were trying to "out" some "damned spots" with washing soda. Altogether, the Professor's manner is as wierd as his calling. Having explained with a becoming absence of presumption that there is but little time left for his hearers to buy tickets for the stage performance, the savant passes on to a pithy explanation of hypnotic suggestion that for long, hard of hypnotic suggestion that for long, hard words beats out Rider Haggard's vocabulary. At the call for "subjects" there is at first no answer, even the three men that stand so close about the platform steps that none can get by them do not at once respond. But soon there is a movement toward the stage from several parts of the crowd, at which the three men step briskly up the stairs and are followed with equal promptness by a boy that is a-shake with St. Vitus dance. The adventurous ones that seemed have caused this change of mind on the part of the three gentlemen that held the foot of the stairs in the manner of Horatius at the bridge are the ked at the steps by the assertion that no more subjects are wanted this time. A JEWELLER ARRESTED.

Attempted Bribery the Charge-An Alleged

Alvin L. Strasburger of the firm of Louis Strasburger's Son & Co., 16 and 18 Maiden lane. was arrested and taken before United States Commissioner Shields yesterday on a charge of having attempted to bribe James H. Hefferman, a deputy collector and inspector of customs sta-tioned by the United States Government at Montreal. He was released under $2,000 ball to appear on April 14.

Hefferman, according to his story, followed ames Baxter, a money broker of Montreal, from that city to New York on Sunday last, and was with Baxter on Monday when Baxter went to Mr. Strasburger's store and left there a package of twenty-two diamonds, valued at $2,400, which he had brought from Canada without paying duty on them.

E. H. Twohey, another United States customs officer at Montreal, had learned that Baxter was about to come to New York with a number of uncut diamonds, and he and Hefferman shadowed the braker to the United States. Baxter crossed to Piattsburgh without declaring the diamonds, it is said, and came on to New York and put up at the Astor House, whither Heffer man followed him.
On Monday, according to one story, Baxter went to the Strasburger store, followed still by Hefferman, who saw him hand over a package of diamonds. Hefferman went in and demanded the lot. According to his story he was invited to accompany Baxter and Strasburger into a to accompany Baxier and Strasburger into a rear office, and Mr. Strasburger offered him $100 to say nothing about what had occurred. He reported the matter to the Special Treasury Agents here, and was instructed to make an affidavit charging the merchant with attempted bribery. The affidavit was subscribed to yesterday, and Strasburger's arrest on a warrant followed.

In the mean time, according to news despatches received from Plattsburgh on Wednesday night, Baxter was arrested there by Hefferman on Tuesday, and locked up in the Wether-ill House for the night. He managed to escape, and went back to Montreal, where he now is.

From a source friendly to Mr. Strasburger the story comes that Hefferman was more adroit in his detective work than the official version of his proceedure indicates. It is said that after Hefferman made the rest of the journey to New York in company with Baxter as a fellow traveller, and went along with him to the Astor House.

It is said that Hefferman drow the broker into

It is said that Hefferman drew the broker into conversation on the subject of diamonds, saying that he would like to buy some good ones cheap, and that Haxter thereupon took him to Strasburger's store, where he produced the stones which he had brought over duty free.

Hefferman then disclosed his identity as an officer, and, according to this version of the story, told Baxter that if he would come back to Plattsburgh and pay the duty there need be no more trouble over the matter. It is said that the officer and his advisors thought that the Plattsburgh district was the one naving jurisdiction, and that it would be necessary to get Baxter up there.

Plattsburgh district was the one having jurisdiction, and that it would be necessary to get Baxter up there.

Baxter went along with Hefferman, who, when he got him there arrested him, only to find that there was no jurisdiction there and that New York was the place for proceedings. Then followed the progress to the Wetherill House, and the escape, after which Hefferman returned here and made his affidavit, on which the arrest of Strasburger was effected.

Ex-Judge A. J. Dittenhoefer, who appeared as counsel for Strasburger, said last night that he was satisfied that the charge against his client was utterly baseless.

The customs officers say that the twenty-two stones brought here by Baxter are a part of a consignment of 230 stones, valued at between $11,000 and $12,000, that arrived recently at Montreal, many of them probably destined for the United States.

The Diamond Imperters' Protective Association of this city is adding the Government in the prosecution of the charge against Mr. Strasburger.

GOOD FRIDAY SERVICES

Held Yesterday in the Roman Catholic Good Friday services were held in the Roma; Catholic and Protestant Episcopal churches yesterday, and most of them were attended by large congregations. In the Roman Catholic and in a number of the Episcopal churches the three-hour service—from twelve to three—called variously the "Agony Service." "The Preaching of the Cross," and "The Service of the Passion" was held. In Trinity Chapel Dr. Morgan Dix preached the seven sermons of the service which are based on the seven words of Christ from the cross. Trinity Church was crowded to the doors throughout the service. The same service was held at St. Ignatius's Church and the Church of St. Mary the Virgin, the two well-known ritualistic Episcopal parishes. At well-known ritualistic Episcopal parishes. At St. Mary's the high altar, the chancel, and the choir were draped in lustreless black hangings. The crucifix was hidden in black drapery, and no color or candles were visible.

In the Lady Chapel, however, in which the blessed sacrament was reserved, the candles were lit and the altar was covered with white flowers. The crucifix was covered only with a thin white lace vell. The organ was not used in the singing. At St. Ignatius the chancel was hung with dark purple cloth and the altar draped in black. At this church the mass of the presanctified, common in the Roman Catholic churches, was celebrated at 7 o'clock. In this service the host consecrated on Thursday is used. This mass is known in the Greek Church, but is very rare in the Episcopal Church, and could be witnessed in only the most advanced ritualistic parishes. All other celebrations of the holy communion throughout the year are called "masses" at Father Ritchie's church, but this figured yesterday in the list of services as "Holy Communion, which signified that the sacrifice of the mass, through the use of the pre-consecrated host, did not take place in the service.

The three-hour service at St. Francis Xavier's Church was largely attended, and so were the services at St. Patrick's Cathedral. The high mass was celebrated at the cathedral at 10 o'clock. The altar was decorated in black, and the candles were not lighted during the service. Father William Daly was the celebrant, the Rev. Thomas Phealan the deacon, and the Rev. Joseph Biehrey sub-deacon. The masters of ceremonies were the Rev. James N. Connolly and the Rev. Henry T. Newey. Archbishop Corrigan was seated on the throne during the service. St. Mary's the high altar, the chancel, and the orrigan was scated on the throne during the service.

In most of the Episcopal churches there were said morning prayer, the litany, and evening prayer, even where the three-hour service was not held.

The Exchanges were closed during the day, and so were many of the large business and financial institutions. The Federal and State departments kept open for a part of the day, at least, in accordance with the law.

BROOKLYN TROLLEY UNION.

Nassau Takes the Atlantic Avenue System - Kings County Traction Company. In accordance with the terms of its lease, the Nassau Electric Railroad Company in Brooklyn will assume control of the entire Atlantic avenue system at midnight to-night. Plans have been made to open new lines to the suburbs, and through the union of the two roads a single fare only will be charged for a ride to any part of the city. With the exception of the motormen and conductors, nearly all the employees of the Atlautic avenue road will lose their jobs through the new deal. In future, the motormen and the new deal. In future, the motormen and conductors will receive 20 cents an hour instead of being paid by the trip, as hitherto.

ALMASY, April 3. The Kings County Traction Company, with principal office in New York, which was incerporated a few days ago, to-day certified to the Secretary of State that it had increased its capital stock from $1,000 to $4,500,000, to consat of 45,000 shares of $100 each. The company has a paid in capital of $0,000, and no debts or liabilities. The certificate is signed for the company by P. F. Vaughn and J. A. Soyder. The company paid a tax of $5,317 to the State Treasurer for the privilege of increasing its capital stock.

Mrs. Kelly's Six-toed Cat at Home Again. The six-toed cat for the alleged theft of which Mrs. John Keily, a fortune teller in a dime museum, had Mrs. Maria Burns of 54 York street, Jersey City, arrested, is at home. It did not come back like the cat in the song, but was brought back by a boy, who delivered it to products and Manning yesterday. The boy said he brought the cat from New York, but refused to give any further information about it. Lower Rente-Landlords May No. Indeed. The total amount of rebates that will be due from the city to liquor dealers who hold paid-up censes which run beyond June 30 is $544,600 and there is no fund in the city treasury or which to draw for the payment of the claims which the Raines law authorizes the liquor dealers to make. If it be suggested that the money recently taken in by the present Excise Commissioners and that to be taken in by them during the present month be reserved for the part payment of these rebates, the answer is made that certain charitable institutions have an absolute right to this money, and can compel the Board of Estimate and Apportionment to dis-tribute it to them. There was $112,000 turned over to the City Chamberlain by the Excise commissioners on April 1, but this will all have to be distributed to the charitable institutions, There is nothing left for the city seemingly but to put off the payment of the rebate to license holders until the $544,000 can be included in the tax budget for next year, or to have the Legislature pass an act permitting the issue of bonds to meet the claims more bonds.

Corporation Council Scott and his assistants took a holiday yesterday, and the opinion which was to have been furnished to Chief of Police Conlin regarding the right of restaurants having a liquor license to keep open during "close" urs and on Sunday was not prepared. be forthcoming this morning, in time to rule the police on Sunday. It is expected by the police and by some of the restaurant keepers that the opinion will follow the lines of that given by Assistant District Attorney Miles of Kings county, that restaurants may not only keep open in hours prohibited for salons, but may furnish liquor with meals. This opinion, it was said yesterday, was based on the decision of the General Term of the Supreme Court in this department in 1887, that liquor might be served with food by restaurants on Sunday.

Several restaurants were licensed as hotels yesterday. Among them were Martin's, at Broadway and Fortieth street, and La Grange's, on Thirty-fourth street, near liroadway. Twelve applications for change to a hotel license were made. Among the applicants were Christian A. Wolf, in Carnegie Music Hall; the proprietor of Browne's chop house in Twenty-seventh street, John W. Ennis, who runs the restaurant in Fourteenth street, opposite Tammany Hall, and two other restaurant proprietors.

A great many complaints have been made to the present Excise Commissioners on the part of landlords that saloon men who are their tenants demand a reduction in rent because of the Increase in the fee which they have to pay to continue in business. The lundicrds say they cannot afford to reduce rents because the Raines for violations of the law committed on it. They declare that they must have high rent as a cort of indemnity for the risks they take.

Assistaut District Attorney Henry W. Unger said yeaterday that Chief Conlin is assuming too much when he undertakes to say that a saloon keeper may not sell food for a cent if he so desires. Mr. Unger went further and said that there would be no violation of the Raines law if a man who drank at the bar should take a hit for much. The violation, he asserted, is accomplished by the giving away of food only.

The Republican leaders in the various Senate districts have been rying to agree on men for appointment as Excise Special Agents. They have not succ

BABYLON LICENSE FIGHT. Business Men Opposed to the Polley of BABYLON, L. I., April 3. The excitement over the issue of local option continues to increase. Last evening the license party held another meeting, and arrangements were made to conduct a vigorous campaign and to instruct the voters in the matter of preparing their ballots. The feeling among the business men continues to grow against the proposition to abolish all licenses, as it is feared such action would doom Babylon as a summer resort. One church member said to-day: "It won't do to abolish the sa-loons and hotels. I am not a drinking man, but I know that it would simply be suicidal to every business interest here. The class of people who pushess interest here. The class of beople who frequent temperance summer resorts are the class who live on crackers and cheese. They are not the spenders."

The husiness men are outspoken against the clause in the Raines law which prohibits the sale of liquor on State property, and which will, it is feared, militate against the opening of the Surf Hotel at Fire Island, a source of large revenue to the village. Surf Hotel at Fire Island, a source of large revenue to the village.

Thomas Powell, the Republican nomines for Supervisor, is an avowel supporter of party measures, and is a champion of the Haines law, while ex-Justice John D. Capen, the Democratic nomines, who was for over a quarter of a century a member of the Babylon Town Board, is more liberal in his views, and many who are opnosed to blue laws have announced that they will support him.

RAINES'S LAW IN ROCHESTER. District Attorney Forsyth Puts His Own

ROCHESTER, April 3.- The Police Commissioners on last Monday addressed a letter of inquiry to District Attorney Forsyth as to his interpretation of certain portions of the Raines Liquor Tax law. They sought information on three points: whether the law was now in force as to the sale of liquor by women or girls not members of the dealer's own family, the abolition of screens, shades, &c., during the close hours and Sunday, and the prohibition of free hours and Sunday, and the prohibition of free lunches.

Mr. Forsyth in his reply takes ground radically different from that occupied by officials in other portions of the State. He believes that the indicated provisions of the law are not in force until April 30, because, before that time, there will be no machinery in operation under the law by which a dealer can procure a permit osel, or by which violations of the act can be punished. He is also inclined to think that it was not the intention of the Legislature to enforce an act making such sweeping changes in the established order of things until the people most affected had had an opportunity to adjust their affairs to the changed conditions.

THE DRYS IN IOWA.

A Bill to Legalize the Manufacture of Liquors Defeated.

DES MOINES, Iowa, April 3.-In the Senate yesterday the bill to legalize the manufacture of liquors in lows was defeated, 22 to 27, with one member absent, who sent word that he desired the record to show that had he been present he would have voted against the bill. The ent he would have voted against the bill. The seven Democrats voted for the bill, filling ex-planations which in substance said they re-garded the measure as a very short step, but in the right direction. They first proposed a sub-stitute bill, a far more liberal measure, which was defeated by a strict party vote.

Central Vermont Bondholders.

The Consolidated Railroad of Vermont five per cent. bondholders have formed a committee for their protection, composed of Benjamin P. Cheney of Boston, Samuel E. Kliner, New York, representing the Billings estate, and Henry D. Day of R. L. Day & Co., Boston, with Michael H. Cardozo, New York, and Moorfield storey. Roston, counsel.

They consider immediate action necessary by the bondholders for their protection in the litigation now pending in the United States Cir-cuit Court in Vermont between the Grand Trunk Railway Company and the Central Ver-mont Railroad Company, and invite all bond-holders to communicate immediately with the Secretary, 735 Exchange building, Roston. It is asserted that the propriety of lessing receivers' certificates ahead of the five per cent, bonds to redeem the floating debt is being considered, and can only be prevented by the prompt and united action of the bondholders.

OBITUARY.

Charlotte Augusta Hamilton, a granddaughter of Alexander Hamilton, died on Thursday last at her home, 17 West Twentieth street, at the age of 78. Miss Hamilton was the eldest daughter of John Church Hamilton, a son of Alexander Hamilton, John Hamilton was aide de camp to Major-General Harrison, and resigned in June, 1814. He published a " Life of Alexander Hamilton," and also compiled an elaborate work entitled "History of the Republic of the United States as Traced in the Writings of Alexander Hamilton and His Contemporaries." Her mother was Miss Maria Eliza Van den Henvel, who was a member of an illustrious Holland family, her father having at one time been Governor of Dutch Guiana at Essequibo, Miss Hamilton was born in this city on the corner of Broadway and Barclay street, which at that time was the fashionable residence portion of the city. As a young lady she was remarkable for her beauty. She was a very highly educated woman. Her culture and her amiable disposition kept about her a large circle of friends to the last. She was particularly well versed in the historical events pertaining to America, and was always kept informed of current events, in which she took an active interest. As a child she was a pet of Gen. Lafayette. Miss Hamilton was connected with many church charities in this city and was very largely interested in the success of the Reformed Church in Mexico. She was a sister of the late Mrs. Charles A. Peabody. She was also a cousin of Mrs. J. J. Astor. Two sisters and three brothers survive her. High northwest winds were blowing , esterday over the lake regions and the Middle Atlantic and New England coasts. They were due to the passing of an area of low pressure northeastward from the northern New England coast and an advancing area of high pressure from the West. The veloci-ties varied from 30 to 60 miles an hour, but will diminish to day. Colder weather spread over all the Atlantic

States. The greatest fall of temperature, 20%, oc. curred over the South Atlantic coast. Over all the northern half of the country the temperature was again below freesing point. Light frost was resorted at Memphis, New Orleans, and Jacksonville Clear weather was general, except for a few srow flurries over ? ew York, New Jersey, northern Pennvivania, and Oldo. In this city the day was a mixture of sunshine and snow, with high northwest winds averaging 25 miles an hour, highest velocity if miles an hour, average humidity, 71 per cold,; highest official emperature 38 , lowest $5'; harometer, corrected read to sea level, at 5 A. CLEMENT EXCISE DEPUTY.

COMMISSIONER LYMAN GIVES OUT THE FIRST PLUM.

Appoints Mayaned N. Clement of Canandaigna General Beputy Clement Was Raines's Candidate for Commissioner-Hilliard Likely to Get the New York Job. ALBANY, April 3. - Excise Commissioner Lynan began handing out the jobs to-day.

first one, that of the General Deputy for the department, at $4,000 a year, went to Maynard N. Clement of Canandalgua. Mr. Clement is its years old, and was formerly District Attorney of Ontario county. He was Senator Raines's candidate for Commissioner. This is the first important piece of patronage that Raines has to show for his ceaseless activity this winter in the direction of filling up the State service with Wayne and Ontario county statesmen. It is likely to be the only plum that Raines will get this year.

If doubts existed that Mr. Lyman would build up his gigantic machine on strictly organ-ization lines, except in so far as he is prevented by the Civil Service law, they are in a fair way to be dispelled. This may be due partly to the fact that his constant companion and astute advisor is George W. Aldridge of Rochester, Superintendent of Public Works, the expert distributor of petronage, who is going to pass out that $5,000,000 worth of canal jobs if some body will only come after it. Other pretty able politicians, such as State Committeemen John F. Parkhurst of Eath and John T. Mott of Oswego, are helping to steer the new Commis-politicians, such as State Committeemen John F. Parkhurst of Hath and John T. Mott of Oswego, are helping to steer the new Commissioner.

Mr. Lyman does not expect to name his three special deputies for New York, Brooklyn, and Buffalo before Monday. He is pretty likely to select George S. Hilliard, the choice of the local Republican machine, for the $4,000 New York deputyship. E. H. M. Rochr is regarded as the leading candidate for the $3,000 place in Brooklyn. For the Buffalo place, which pays $2,000, Samuel Caldwell seems to have the best chance. Mr. Caldwell's friends have been urging his claims to-day on the ground that he was instrumental in stemming, to some extent, the McKinley flood which threatened to entirely swamp the Morton boom in Eric county. Caldwell, they say, hustled around in the Thirty-second Congress district and succeeded in getting enough Morton delegates elected to give him a majority of six over McKinley in the district Convention. Caldwell also has the endorsement of the local Republican organization.

Mr. Lyman made several appointments on probation to-day for his office force. As the places are clerical, the names were taken from the civil service lists. Those appointed were W. L. Markel of Syracuse, J. Chariton of Peckskill, Henry A. Crossens of Brooklyn, and E. A. Kempton of Duchess county, clerks; W. A. Bennett of Albany, messenger; Grace Dorn of Elmira and Anna L. O'Conneil of Seneca Falls stemogranders. The salartes will be fixed by Commissioner Lyman under the authority conferred upon him by the Raines law. The question whether the sixty special agents at $1,200 a year are to be appointed for the good of the organization or are to be placed under the civil service rules is still undecided, for. Morton, Lefut, Gov. Saxton, and Commissioner Lyman had a long talk over it tends to the constitutional provision requiring competitive examination whenever practicable executes itself and nullifies the exemption of the Raines law, which the Attorney-General has decided contemplates the ex

A Bloomingdale Asylum Employee Kills Himself,

WHITE PLAINS, April 3. Francis L. Vincent, the bookkeeper of Bloomingdale Asylum, com-mitted suicide last night, or early this morning, In his room at the asylum. Vincent was always at his desk at 8 o'clock. This morning he was not at his place at the usual hour and had not been seen at the breakfast table. An orderly was sent to his room. The door was forced and was sent to his room. The door was forced and Vincent was found dead in his bed, with a ragged bullet hole in his right temple. Around the wound were powder marks. A 32-calibre revolver, with one chamber empty, was found on the floor by the bedside where it had fallen. on the floor by the bedside where it had fallen. Coroner Birch immanched a jury and set the inquest down for Monday at 2 o'clock. The authorities of the asylum are at a loss to account for Vincent's act, but his fellow employees say that he appeared to be depressed lately.

Vincent was 47 years old and an Englishman.

Thomas Wharton of Philadelphia a Suicide PHILADELPHIA, April 8.—Thomas Wharton, member of the editorial staff of the Philalelphia Tines, committed suicide this morning by jumping from the fourth-story window of his boarding house at 904 Spruce street.
